

I think the FCC is really stepping out of line. What is this world coming to? Do we need a different system here or what? We have a war going on people dying in the world. Now lets get nick picky about what XM radio offers. Lets not look at the fact that people pay for the service and that it a huge benefit for traffic updates when traveling. I pay for this and its one of the reasons I have XM. I think the FCC should be worrying more about other issues crossing the air waves. I am sure with the terrorism issues out there they can come up with something to keep busy besides taking away good quality service that we pay for and want.
